PROFILE

I'm a writer with over a decade spent finding the story inside things that don't obviously have one: true crime cases, grant applications, brand campaigns, a decade of pop culture criticism ~~nobody paid me to write~~. My background is in screenwriting and script editing across documentary, drama and feature film, which means my job has always come down to the same things: research, structure, and finding the angle that makes someone want to keep reading. I write fluently in both Italian and English, and I spend too much of my time doing it in both languages, sometime mixing them together to create a third language just for fun.

SKILLS

- Research & interviewing
- Narrative structuring
- Long-form writing (IT/EN)
- Editorial development
- WordPress, Photoshop, Canva
- Google Analytics, Social Media

EXPERIENCE

- Editing & copywriting, freelance 2021-2026
 - Wrote and edited narrative content for independent productions, podcaster and cultural associations, turning research and raw material into audience-ready stories;
 - Developed grant dossiers and funding applications, requiring compelling narrative around why a project mattered, not just what it was;
 - Managed editorial content end-to-end, from concept through to distribution.
- Briciola.tv, production 2018-2020
 - Coordinated development on documentary series for international broadcasters (Discovery, HBO, Fox, National Geographic), including true-crime docuseries built on case research and interviews;
 - Worked at the intersection of story and logistics: shaping the narrative of a project while keeping production on schedule.
- Telefilm Addicted, columnist 2008-2019
 - Ran a long-running pop culture and TV column, for things worth writing about, not because I was assigned to;
 - Built a critical voice and a habit of finding an unexpected angle inside subjects everyone else was already covering.
